Reasons for euthanasia

1. The dog is signed over by its owner for euthanasia, usually for one of the following reasons:
 - The dog has bitten a family member or friend.
 - The dog is very ill or old, and the owner cannot afford to take it to the vet to put it down themselves.
 - The owner is shifting house and their new landlord won't allow them to have the dog and it is anti-social towards other people or dogs, so they cannot re-home it.
2. Euthanasia based on behaviour; this may include the following reasons:
 - The dog owner has been convicted of owning a dog that has attacked a person, stock, companion animal or protected wildlife.
 - The dog shows marked aggression to people and/or other animals.
3. Failed a health check.

All dogs are health checked before being put up for adoption and any dog that has significant health issues that would require ongoing treatment at a substantial cost to the new owner and/or experience chronic pain because of their condition are euthanised on humane grounds. The decision to euthanise for health reasons is made in consultation with our vet.

4. Parvo virus

Parvo virus is a nasty virus which lives in the environment for many years and can be picked up by dogs out roaming or going for a walk with their owner. It is particularly prevalent in summer. Unfortunately, this means a number of the dogs we pick up roaming each year have this virus. It is a painful gastrointestinal virus and dogs quickly become lethargic and dehydrated with it. It is not curable, and vets can only treat the symptoms and hope the dog recovers, unfortunately this is not often. To prevent spread and suffering dogs that are showing the signs and symptom and test positive for parvo are euthanised.

5. Breed

Under the Dog Control Act 1996 dogs may be classified menacing for two reasons. One is they have shown aggressive behaviour or been involved in an attack or rushing. The other is based on breed.

Hamilton City Council and many other Councils do not re-home dogs that have to be classified as menacing.
