Subject: Inquiry into road sign naming

Kia Ora,

My name is [REDACTED] and I am a third-year teaching student currently working on an assignment, at the University of Waikato, focused on local social issues in Hamilton. The social issue we are looking into is the naming of road signs around Hamilton. There have been petitions to change some of the road names that have been named after European colonizers such as Cameron, Grey, Bryce, and VonTempsky to name a few, as this causes grief within our Maori communities. After doing some research into the matter, we have discovered that Anzac Parade was originally Richmond St, then Bridge St, before being changed to Anzac parade to incite joy and comradery about Anzac Day. So we ask, why can Hamilton not change road names that incite grief and are a constant reminder of loss and defeat? How is it that we cannot reconcile these feelings within local iwi by changing these road names? The reason I am emailing you today is to ask a few questions. Who decides if a street name can be/will be changed? What is the process of getting a street name changed? Who is consulted in naming streets?

Thank you for taking the time in reading my email, I eagerly await your reply.

Nga Mihi
